

About the Author

Born in Zimbabwe on 13 August 1954, Naison Ngoma is a Zambian national serving as a senior researcher in the Defence Sector Programme of the Institute for Security Studies. He is a retired Zambia Air Force lieutenant colonel and served in a number of staff and command positions in Zambia's Ministry of Defence where he worked as a defence analyst for 24 years.

Holding a degree in economics, a Master's degree in public administration with a focus on regional security (his thesis looked at the Interstate Committee for Defence and Security—ISDSC) and a PhD in regional security, Naison Ngoma has taught international relations, research methodology and security-related subjects in the Ministry of Defence as well as at the University of the Western Cape in the School of Government and the Department of Political Science. His major research interests are political and military integration, collaborative regional security, civil–military relations and defence economics. Dr Ngoma has published in these areas in journals, chapters in books and conference papers.